

NAN BRITTON DEFENDS HER REPUTATION

ECHO OF SENSATIONAL BOOK
HEARD IN TOLEDO COURT
TRIAL

SEEKS $50,000 JUDGEMENT

Marion, Ohio Man Sued For Part In
"The Answer To The President's Daughter"

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 29, (UP)—The reputation of Nan Britton was the focal point of attack again today by the defense, seeking to acquit C. A. Klunk, Marion O., on a charge of libeling Miss Britton through a book which denies her daughter is the child of the late President Warren G. Harding.

Miss Britton asks $50,000 judgment for Klunk's part in distributing "The Answer to The President's Daughter."

Smilingly, Miss Britton withstood a sharp attack on her character leveled by three former school chums at yesterday's session. Mrs. Mary Catherine Hade, Mrs. Ellen Lucile Stahl, and Mrs. Helen Grigsby, all of Marion, averted their faces before her steady gaze as they testified that as a girl her reputation was bad.

Mrs. Hade narrated a story of a nude bathing party which she said, Miss Britton attended, although she could not remember the time, the place nor other members of the party nor the name of the person who had told her the story. She related another story she said she had heard, which told of indiscreet actions of the plaintiff while a guest at the home of Mrs. Annabelle Fairbanks. Mrs. Fairbanks is the daughter of Grant Mouser, attorney for Klunk in the current trial.

Elizabeth Ann, Miss Britton's daughter, was missing from the court room as the trial was resumed today. She was banished by Judge John Killits who said, "This is no place for a girl of her age." Elizabeth Ann is 12.

It was said the heavily loaded trucks had been leaving the county roads in bad condition and that Mr. Walker objected to their continued use by truck haulers.

After the sheriff was called, it was said that Mr. Berns of the Berns Construction company, which is paving road 43, settled the trouble by promising to maintain the county roads while road 43 is being paved.

Residents of Mansfield reported seeing a monkey on the bridge at that place last week. It is thought that the animal had escaped from a Terre Haute park or perhaps from a show troupe passing through the county. A monkey was seen on a Reserve township farm some weeks ago and it is thought it might be the same one.

BUSY PROGRAM FACES CABINET

BRITISH PRIME MINISTER CON-FERS WITH KING AS CAB-INET CONVENES

LONDON, Oct. 29, (UP)—The overwhelming victory of the National Government in the general election was seen today as a most important step toward restoration of the world's general economic stability.

The Government, in a cabinet meeting today, was to begin work on a program expected to include stabilization of the pound sterling, a tariff program, an empire conference, international reparations conferences, and other measures of international importance.

King George received Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald in audience at Buckingham Palace at 9:20 a. m. According to procedure, the prime minister would outline the situation to the king and confer on the terms of the king's speech to be read at the opening of Parliament.

The speech, actually an outline of the Government's policies, was expected to emphasize the necessity of measures to restore a favorable trade balance, establish confidence abroad, and rehabilitate industry.

The opening of Parliament has been set for Nov. 10. A speaker will be elected, members sworn in, and other formalities attended to a week later. MacDonald remained with the king 50 minutes. A small crowd cheered the prime minister when he left.

MacDonald proceeded to 10 Downing street where Sir William Jowett, attorney general, and Lord Sankey, lord chancellor, were awaiting him. Instances of pure conservatism on the fullest measure of protectionism when the cabinet discusses the problem of the adverse trade balance was expected to bring the question of a pure Conservative government to an immediate climax.

The friendship between Stanley Baldwin and MacDonald, and Baldwin's attitude that the Conservatives were elected as National party candidates and not Conservative candidates, was expected to keep MacDonald at the head of the government indefinitely.

TO PROSECUTE BEARERS OF FALSE BANK INFORMATION

Department of Banking of Pennsylv-vania To Take Legal Steps to Stop Rumors

The state of Pennsylvania is taking steps to prosecute bearers of false information concerning banks in that state, and vigorous prosecution is being followed up by the department of banking.

Already some arrests and prosecutions have been made where an individual has made statements derogatory to the financial condition of a state banking institution. In many instances where serious financial troubles have taken place, the rumors have all been started by persons talking about something they knew nothing about and in the end great damage has been done to hundreds and thousands of people and to the community as well. The action of the state in its efforts to stop such unnecessary talk will go a long way toward putting an end to false rumors.

MRS. SIMMONS SOBS ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

LEBANON POISON TRIAL SUS-PECT LOSES COMPOSURE
ON WITNESS STAND

DENIES BUYING STRYCHNINE

Farm Woman Charged With Poisoning Of Small Daughter At Family Outing

LEBANON, Ind., Oct. 29 (UP)—Mrs. Carrie Simmons, charged with the murder through poisoned picnic sandwiches of her 10-year-old daughter Alice Jean, was expected to resume today her account of events surrounding the picnic June 21 at which another daughter also died.

The 52-year-old farm mother, testifying for the first time during the five-week trial, already has described making the chicken sandwiches which later were found to have contained strychnine, how she cared for Alice Jean and Virginia Simmons after they were stricken, and denied either buying strychnine capsules or placing them in the sandwiches.

Often the defendant sobbed as she answered defense counsel's questions. Once she collapsed. She was revived, however, and continued her testimony.

Mrs. Simmons was subjected to sharp cross examination by special prosecutor Roy Adney. She denied knowledge of symptoms of strychnine poisoning and testified she had done all possible to relieve her daughters as they lay dying.

When Mrs. Simmons appeared near a second collapse Adney changed the questioning and asked her whether she had entered Charles Friedman's drugstore in Indianapolis on June 18. She said she had not.

"You did not buy strychnine anywhere that day?" asked Adney.

"I never bought any in my life," Mrs. Simmons answered.

There was no bichloride of mercury of corrosive sublimate in the Hancock county farm home of the Simmons. Mrs. Carrie Simmons, charged with the strychnine poisoning of two daughters, told jurors here today upon cross-examination.

Ben Selfres, Boone county prosecutor, said in his opening statement that he would show that Alice Jean and Virginia Simmons had been given bichloride of mercury about a week before they died after eating poisoned chicken sandwiches at a reunion picnic here June 21.

Dr. R. N. Harger, toxicologist, purportedly had reported presence of bichloride of mercury in organs of the girls, but his statement was not admitted to court records.

Mrs. Simmons, calm and appearing more rested than the jurors, said the health of her daughters was good until they were stricken at the picnic grounds. She said that so far as she knew they had taken no medicine containing bichloride of mercury, and denied that she gave any poison to them.

Mrs. Simmons testified that she knew nothing about such poisons. She said there were no capsules in the Simmons home in June, but there may have been capsules in the residence in the past.

Two Are Fined For Intoxication

JOHN HARDWICK OF GREEN-CASTLE GIVEN 30 DAYS ON PENAL FARM

Two men were fined $10 and costs in city court Thursday morning by Mayor W. L. Denman on charges of public intoxication and one of them was given a 30 day term on the Indiana state farm in addition. Both pleaded guilty.

John Hardwick, age about 55 years, of Greencastle, was given the penal farm term because he had been arrested and fined on the same charge before.

Lawrence "Doc" Rhoten, age about 35 years, also of Greencastle, was released after he promised to pay his fine and costs amounting to $40, in weekly installments.

Both men were arrested Wednesday evening on Franklin street by city police and lodged in the county jail to sleep off the effects of two much liquor.

BOY SLAYER IS CALM

ASOTIN, Wash., Oct. 29 (UP)—Facing life imprisonment, twelve year old Herbert Nicolls today awaited sentence on conviction of first degree murder.

The youth was found guilty yesterday by a jury of killing Sheriff John Wormell during the holdup of a store last August 15.

Nicolls took his conviction calmly. Only a slight trembling of his lower lip betrayed the excitement with which he heard the jury foreman read the verdict which carried a recommendation of life imprisonment.

ADMITTED TO BAR

John G. Call, of Greencastle, was admitted to the bar of Putnam County Thursday. Mr. Call is the first Putnam County applicant to be admitted to practice law here under a new state law which provides for a rigorous examination. The order admitting Call to the bar was signed by Clarence Martin, judge of the Indiana Supreme Court and Fred B. Pickett, clerk of the Supreme court.

CREDIT BANK PLANS MADE

BELIGIAN FINANCIER HAS AP-PROVAL OF VARIOUS IM-PORTANT PERSONAGES

PARIS, Oct. 29, (UP)—Plans for creation of an international credit bank to transform the immense total of short-term credits invested in Germany into credits of from three to five years were revealed here today.

The United Press learned that Emile Francqui, Belgian financier who discussed the plan with President Hoover at Washington, had accepted an invitation to proceed to Paris from the United States and confer on the proposal with Premier Pierre Laval and minister of finance Pierre Etienne Flandin.

It was understood President Hoover, governor of the federal reserve board Eugene Meyers, and governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York George L. Harrison, approved the plan and that the fate of the scheme depended upon French financial support, which was not entirely assured.

The international credit bank would cooperate with the Bank for International Settlement at Basle and would, through processes of discount, transform short term credits in Germany estimated variously at between $1,000,000,000 and $2,000,000,000. The bank would centralize control of large international credit operations.

TAXES ARE BEING PAID

TREASURER ESTIMATES 80 PERCENT OF FALL INSTALL-MENT WILL BE PAID

Delinquencies in tax payments this fall will be no greater than usual, County Treasurer Gilbert E. Ogles estimated Thursday morning. He predicted that at least 80 per cent of Putnam county property holders will meet their obligations this fall.

Taxpayers have been flocking to the treasurer's office steadily all this week to pay their fall taxes. Taxes which are not paid by next Monday evening become delinquent and are subject to a delinquency penalty.

Many taxpayers who were not listed for poll tax this spring have paid their poll tax in full this fall. A new state law provides that the fall tax receipt must show payment of poll tax before a license for an automobile or other state license can be purchased next year.

The burial of the infant son, born to Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Thomas, October 29, at the Methodist hospital, in Indianapolis, will be Friday in Clinton Falls cemetery. Mrs. Thomas will be remembered as Miss Thelma Savens and formerly lived here.

BLAST FATAL TO INVENTOR; HOME BURNED

EXPLOSION OF DEWIS KILLS MAKER. COMPANION IS BADLY INJURED

FLAMES THREATEN FAMILY

Firemen Rescue Wife and Small Children of Chicago Man When Home Burns

CHICAGO, Oct. 29, (UP)—The life dream of Emil Schoenberger, amateur inventor, was shattered today when a device he had perfected exploded killing Schoenberger, probably fatally injuring a companion and nearly trapping the inventor's wife and children in the shambles of his garage workshop.

The inventor worked as a chauffeur for Walter C. Peacock, wealthy jeweler. A friend, Robert Post, and Schoenberger were testing a device for high vaporizing of gasoline in a homemade laboratory established in the garage over which the Schoenbergers lived.

Without warning the instrument exploded with terrific force. Doors and windows of the garage were blown out and flaming gasoline enveloped the room. Schoenberger was crushed to death beneath the automobile engine in which the vaporization device had been installed.

Post was saturated with blazing gasoline but managed to crawl out side.

Mrs. Schoenberger and her children, William 3, and Marie, 7, were trapped in the living quarters over the garage. Escape down the stairway was barred by flame.

Heading direction of police who arrived almost immediately after the blast, the motor tossed her children safely from the second story window to the arms of officers. Then she jumped and also was caught unhurt by the police.

Only last week Schoenberger had received a patent on his invention. The garage was destroyed.

University Choir Will Make Debut At Sunday Vesper

Dean R. G. McCutchan Will Direct
Famous Music School Choir
Sunday Evening

The choir of DePauw university will make its initial appearance of this season next Sunday evening. The group will present the program for the weekly vesper service, which will begin at 6:30 o'clock.

Robert G. McCutchan, dean of the School of Music of the university, will direct the choir as in past years. The men and women in the organization have been practicing for the last few weeks in preparation for the debut Sunday night.

Last year the DePauw choir sang thirty-eight concerts in thirty-two weeks. Their program was broadcasted when they sang in Chicago.

Several times during the year the DePauw choir sang at Indiana University in Bloomington and at Wabash in Crawfordsville. Each time at these places they were met with the highest appreciation on the part of the audience.

Few DePauw students realize that their school has such a high quality musical organization. The choir is made up of twenty-one students and is under the direction of Professor McCutchan.

Their appearance this Sunday will be the first local one of the school year. A large crowd is expected to hear the choir which ranks as one of the finest in the country.

GRANT COUNTY JURY TO PROBE OGDEN CHARGE

ASK ATTORNEY GENERAL TO PRESENT EVIDENCE IN MARION CORRUPTION

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 29 (UP)—Attorney General James M. Ogden will appear before the Grant county grand jury to present information which he contends will show that the city of Marion is overrun with vice and corruption, it was announced today.

Ogden said he had accepted the invitation extended by E. E. Gowing, foreman of the jury.

The attorney general, who made first charges against the city in a speech at South Bend, said he would take letters and other information gathered by an investigator.

The invitation read: "The grand jury now in session is anxious to do its duty and will welcome information from all sources concerning law violations in Marion. We invite you to come here at your earliest convenience to lay before the grand jury all evidence of law violations here, of which you claim to have knowledge."

YOUR BOY, MY BOY, OUR BOY

There is an army of boys in every community. In that army is your boy, my boy and our boy. Perhaps one or more of these boys belongs to you. One or more may belong to me. There are some who have no one who looks after them in a definite way, and so far as the best interests of the community are concerned, those boys are our boys.

Greencastle has two of the best banks in the country. They are valuable assets. We have some substantial industries in our community. They are valuable. We have a fine group of individual business men who are an asset to the community. We have a splendid university in which we all take pride. Greencastle is a good city in which to live and do business and raise a family. Our churches and schools are second to none in the state.

But there is no asset in Greencastle comparable to our army of boys. And there is no asset which can more quickly and easily be turned from an asset into a liability than this army of boys. What are we doing to make and keep every boy an asset? What are we doing to keep these boys from becoming liabilities? Is your boy, and my boy and our boy safe in Greencastle? All of the hazards and dangerous curves on our national and state highways are marked for the motorist. Are the hazards and dangerous curves in our community for our boys well marked?

Think about your boy, my boy and our boys in Greencastle and ask what you as a father or mother can do for them.

ILLINI DEAN COMMENTS ON YOUNG FOLKS

"NOT AS BAD AS THEY APPEAR ON SURFACE" HE DECLARES

"MAJORITY PRETTY SHREWD"

Thomas A. Clark, Dean Of Me4
Emeritus, At University Of Illinois In Statement

URBANA, Ill., Oct. 29, (UP)—Thomas A. Clark, dean of men emeritus of the University of Illinois, paused in his task of raking leaves from his front lawn today and summed up his attitude toward the young folk of the colleges and universities.

"They are not as bad as they appear on the surface. These young people of ours," said the white-haired "friendly philosopher" who has helped thousands of college boys solve problems ranging from financial muddles to campus romances.

"There is nothing the present-day young person dislikes so much as being laughed at and there is nothing that irritates him or her as much as being thought unsophisticated. So the college boys and girls broadcast their irregularities.

"But today's college boy is a lot better than he says he is and, in general, better than his father was, although he doesn't want you to think so. The same goes for his sister."

Dean Clark speaks with modest authority. He was the first dean of men in any American school. For almost 30 years he was mentor and comrade to the young chaps who thronged the campus of the University of Illinois. When necessary, he was disciplinarian. Last summer he retired at the age of 69, not to idle but to write. He has an extensive correspondence, writes frequent syndicated articles and is busy with executive duties for two national fraternities.

Despite two major operations during his last year of deanship, Clark is vigorous and weighs five pounds more than he ever did. His white hair is but little thinner than it was years ago. His smile is as ready, his chuckle as infectious as ever.

"These boys and girls are pretty shrewd," he said. "Under the thin veneer of their cynicism and sophistication is a stratum of genuineness and seriousness upon which I am sure you can depend."

"They are cast against a background different from that of their parents. But by the tomorrow we talk about in speaking of youth, they will be conventional folk, taking their tasks seriously and raising well-brought-up children."

Dean Clark believes whatever genuine criticism is due the college generation can be attributed to wrong training in the home. He described a typical modern family, with the father belonging to a luncheon club and a professional group, the mother hurrying away to meetings of music and bridge clubs, and the young folk themselves engrossed with clubs and fraternities.

"Neither my mother nor my wife's mother ever belonged to any clubs or committee," he said. "Maybe that has something to do with the changing codes of conduct."

He observed that college students are franker than seems necessary but said he believed they were no less moral than the generation that preceded them.

COMMISSION RESUMES HEARING
INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 29 (UP)—The Indiana Public Service Commission's investigation of the therm basis for measuring gas consumption was continued here today.

Representatives of about 30 state cities attended, most of them protesting against the therm system, which has supplanted the cubic foot measurement in many localities.

The therm system provides that a consumer pays for the number of heat units consumed, instead of volume. British thermal units, the standard measure for heat, is used as the basis for the new billing.

Commissioner Howell Ellis conducted the hearing.

TIGER CUBS HOST TO ATHENIAN GRIDDEES

Crawfordsville high's football team is making ready for its invasion of Greencastle this weekend for the next to the last grid encounter on the Athenians' schedule.

The contest will be played Friday afternoon, and for once, the local preps are favored to down the Tiger Cubs. Revenge should be of that sweet variety if the Cravermen do come through with a victory after all the basketball losses the locals have suffered at their hands the past few years.

The victory over Attica last week boosted the Athenians' total of wins to six, against a single setback. Lebanon has been the only team to conquer Crawfordsville this season, and while there is no intended attempt to discredit the team Kip Parr put on the field against the locals, Lebanon's winning touchdown was scored on a fluke.

Only one game remains on the card after the Greencastle affair Friday—that with Peru.—Crawfordsville Journal.

Greencastle will face Crawfordsville without the services of Canella, guard, who is suffering from a leg infection.

MOVIES

AT THE GRANADA

Indiana may truthfully lay claim to more wits than any other state, though the reason is yet to be found. George Ade says it's a state he'll never go back on or to. Never a funnier Hoosier trod stage or screen than Charles Butterworth whose solemn humor makes merry scenes of "The Bargain" the first National picture now showing at the Granada theater.

Other featured players in this captivating domestic comedy-drama are Lewis Stone, Doris Kenyon, Una Merkel and Evelyn Knapp. "The Bargain" is an adaptation of "You and I" the Harvard prize play by Philip Barry which enjoyed a long run on Broadway.

Trapping Season Opens November 15

TRAPPERS NOT ALLOWED TO BUY OR SELL FUR AMONG SELVES

County officials yesterday explained new laws governing the fur business in the state this season, which were passed by the last legislature to protect trappers and also to preserve the fur-bearing animals in the state.

All buyers of furs who reside in the state must pay a license fee of $10. Non-resident buyers must pay a fee of $50. Trappers are prohibited from buying and selling among themselves and when the season closes all buyers must make a report to the state showing from whom they bought their furs, what they paid for them and the amount they received. For every violation of this law there is a fine of $250.

The law is considered a protection to boys who trap in that it prevents them from selling furs when they do not know their real value, while licensed buyers do.

The season for trapping fur-bearing animals in Indiana opens November 15 and continues until the middle of January.

Mrs. R. W. Pence Hostess To Morning Musicals

At the meeting of the Greencastle Morning Musicals in the home of Mrs. R. W. Pence, on Wednesday morning, the hostess discussed the music of the early Catholic church. In introducing the subject Mrs. Pence suggested that the general lack of information concerning the earliest music of the church might be accounted for by its lack of a physical basis except in performance. She added that only a small portion of the old music was printed, and much of that had been lost.

The first music of the Catholic church, borrowed from the Greeks, was arranged by St. Ambrose, whose work was improved upon by St. Gregory. The resulting chant became the forerunner of a type of sacred music called Gregorian, a name which was soon given to every plain song or ecclesiastical melody. The distinguishing characters of this music were the conformity of tones to the metre and accent of the text, and a resulting irregularity of rhythm.

Since the music of the Church is largely a means of expressing the liturgy or mass, it should be noted that the ritual, which was originally rendered in the chant, was not the work of one composer, but rather a collaboration. Indeed, Scripture lessons, hymns, and responses, were interspersed with set prayers, were woven together until the whole became a religious poem, entirely in Latin, in which were expressed the relation of Christ to the Church.

The result of a long evolution, the modern music of the Church may be characterized by three developmental epochs: the unison chant, the unaccompanied chorus, and the mixed solo and chorus with instrumental accompaniment. The period of the unaccompanied chorus extended from the twelfth to the middle of the sixteenth century culminating in the works of Palestrina. This flawless artist, known as the savior of Church music, enriched every portion of the ritual with his compositions, his masses numbering nearly a hundred. Associated with Palestrina were Monteverdi and Vittoria, all three of whom devoted their entire energies to the Church, and whose work may be counted the most important contribution to Italian music in the sixteenth century.

To illustrate the music of the early Church, Mrs. Pence presented the following program:

Gregorian Mass For the Dead.
Chant—Psalm 112.
Chant—Psalm 116 (To be sung on Sundays where there is a feast.)

Daughters of Statesmen Form Sharp Contrast

Jose Laval, Fun-Loving Daughter of French Premier, Is Unlike Ishbel MacDonald, Except

PREMIER LAVAL AND DAUGHTER JOSETTE

PREMIER MACDONALD AND DAUGHTER ISHBEL

Whether or not comely, dark-haired Miss. Jose Laval, nineteen-year-old daughter of Premier Pierre Laval of France, helps to solve the world's problems, she makes a very decorative addition to the Premier's party. In striking up a father-and-daughter political alliance, the Laval have followed a precedent set by the British Premier Ramsay MacDonald and his daughter and inseparable companion Ishbel. In spite of their common interest in politics, the two young women are extremely unlike. Jose, vivacious, enthusiastic, is a typical school girl on a holiday, while Ishbel is a very serious-minded young person who, when she is not furthering her father's career, spends her time in social welfare work.

Iowa Shows Ease Of Road Construction

Eleven Years Ago Iowa's Primary System Was 77 Per Cent Unimproved: Now 90 Per Cent
Surfaced

Amazing things may be accomplished in road building when communities make logical plans and carry them out. A decade ago, the road problem looked somewhat hopeless. Eleven million automobiles then. Today there are in excess of twenty-six million motor vehicles and prospects for nation-wide motoring comfort and cheapness have never looked brighter.

Indicative of the progress of many states is the story of Iowa. A short time ago, Fred R. White, chief engineer of the Iowa state highway commission, addressed grandstand crowds at the State Fair in Des Moines and in a few brief words re-told the story of how Iowa got out of the mud. He said:

"In 11 years we have built a new system of roads and they are paying for themselves in increased earnings."
"From a primary road system, which 11 years ago was 77 per cent unimproved and 90 per cent unsur-faced, we have progressed to a primary road system which is 90 per cent surfaced and only 7 per cent unimproved."

"All of this has been accomplished without taxing real property. The road user is paying the bill. The receipts from motor license fees, gasoline tax and federal aid have already paid for 60 per cent of this construction cost. Only 40 per cent of the expenditure is represented by bonds now outstanding. Of a total construction expenditure in the past 11 years amounting to 225 million dollars, current funds have paid 129 million dollars, leaving only 96 million dollars represented by bonds.

"In 1920 the motor license fees going into the primary road fund amounted to $6,724,000. There was no gasoline tax. In 1931 the motor license fees and gasoline tax going to the primary road fund will amount to about $17,500,000. Thus, the annual earnings of these primary roads have increased $10,776,000. In 11 years we have built a new system of roads and they are paying for themselves in increased earnings."

"In the last five years 3,300 miles of pavement have been built, an average of 676 miles a year, enough to pave a road from Des Moines to Denver, and in the last five years pavement has been built in Iowa to reach from New York to San Francisco."

FRUIT FARMERS FIGHT OVER-PRODUCTION

Russell Lord, agricultural economist and associate editor of The Country Home, returned to New York today after a two months' study of what he called "the most revolutionary experiment ever tried in connection with over-production."

This experiment, which may result in a new control over economic laws, but which most farmers will regard with trepidation and misgiving, is taking place in the San Joaquin valley. It consists of a deliberate destruction of thriving peach orchards by the fruit growers themselves, in order to cut down the crop, not merely for this year, but for all time to come.

"Never before in the history of man has there been anything like it," said

Mr. Nord. "I have seen farmers putting up living orchards and being compensated for so doing by cash payment. Next year, unless heaven sends frost or blight in unexpected profusion, another ten per cent of California's acreage of canning peaches will come out forever."

The San Joaquin valley, he explained, raises all the clingstone canning peaches that are grown in the United States. At present it is producing 25 per cent more of this fruit than the market can absorb. The surplus has lowered the price until nobody can possibly make a profit. This year's price was less than half the average grower's cost of production.
Hence the widespread approval of the plan to uproot a part of the trees, and bring production down to demand.

"Since 1928," said Mr. Lord, "more than a fifth of the 65,000 acres which grow clingstone peaches for the market have been cleared of trees. And more is to follow."

"What will the farm world, which so bitterly condemned the military destruction of fruit trees in France during the world war, say to this wilful and ruthless destruction in times of peace. All these schemes to offset the earth's generosity offend some deepest instinct within us. To destroy and gain sounds all wrong, somehow, to farmers; it seems inhuman, rash and unsound; it appears to be a plunge into economic insanity beyond even the farm board's midsummer proposal that every third row of cotton be plowed down."

"And yet what could be more unsound than the actual world agricultural situation against which such desperate struggles are involved? Too much food, therefore people go hungry. Too much cotton, therefore they go threadbare."

"Perhaps what is needed in the face of so savage a paradox is a complete change of mind, an utter abandonment of the easy, conventional, sentimental sort of thinking which accounts production in itself a social benefaction, and the destruction of goods or foodstuffs a sin."

Chapter XIII

THE TRAIL OF MURDER
The room was dim.
The only light shone on a small platform, before the shadow-shrouded figures of six masked men. Standing in this patch of light was Donlan, Centro's former captain of police, now the most trusted operator for the Secret Six.

"Yes, I knew these hoodlums well. I saw them crawl out of their alleys," Donlan was speaking forcefully. "While men like Scorpio are living in luxury, every decent citizen in the United States is 'on the spot'—potentially a victim. Business is being gutted into and even our homes threatened."

The booming of a deep-throated bell was heard. Then a voice cut in on him.

"The district attorney and operator thirty-six are outside."

Donlan issued orders. "Send them in."

The district attorney came first. In back of him was Carl Luckner. He stood there peering through the light into the shadowed room at the group of masked men.

"Operator thirty-six has brought us more valuable information than any man on our force," was Donlan's introduction of him. "For two years he has been an intimate of Scorpio's gang. A dangerous mission, gentlemen. You know what would happen to him if they ever found out about his service and loyalty to us."

It was Carl's first visit to the headquarters of the Secret Six.

He whistled in sharp surprise. "What do you make of it?" demanded Hank.

"The same thing you did," coolly answered the expert. "The same gun killed them both."

Hank nodded.

"And I think," he added quickly, "I know where to locate that gun!"

A clue in the dark. Sixteen people sat in the dressing room of Scorpio's penthouse that night.

Ice tinkled in glasses and gay conversation resounded. Scorpio was "going society." It was his first attempt at bridge.

Seated opposite the gang leader was Anne. Not the laughing Anne of yesterday, but a more mature woman with deep shadowed eyes that betrayed a latent heart ache. On her wrists sparkled costly diamond manacles that spoke of her slavery, that marked her as Scorpio's possession.

Carl, immaculately dressed as Scorpio himself, sat opposite another girl. Eddie, the guard, looked like a fashion-plate. Metz, elaborately dressed as the rest, blinked through his thick glasses at the scene of merriment.

Newton was not playing. He sat back, sipping drinks, and watching cynically.

"And some guy told me this bridge racket was tough—any bimbo could do it," Scorpio remarked expansively.

"Sure," remarked Carl, "you play a

"Now," he requested, "can I see the bullets that killed Collimo?"

remarkable game, Slaughterhouse. Still it might have helped a little if you hadn't played your ace on your partner's king."

"Is that an original Rembrandt?" asked a guest.

"I'll tell the cockeyed world it is—I paid eight hundred bucks for it. Some day I'm going to give you birds a real treat. Goin' to show you my collection of diamond studs. I keep 'em in a safe, so no dirty porch-cumblers prowler can gnom 'em."

Carl turned his face to hide a laugh, and went on playing.

The tinkle of a bell sounded and the butler crossed the room and passed down the hall.

"What is it?" he demanded at the entrance door to the penthouse.

"Telegram for Mr. Scorpio."

The door opened. The uniformed boy handed the butler a message.

"I'll wait to see it there's an answer."

"All right."

The butler turned his back, and returned to the drawing-room, handing Scorpio the envelope.

At the door, the boy peered into the hall.

No one was in sight.

He motioned quickly, and stepped aside.

Hank slid past him, into the hall. He hurried to the first door, entered a room, and closed the door again.

Down the hall came the butler.

"No answer," he informed the boy.

In Scorpio's bedroom the dresser drawer yielded to Hank what he wanted. He put it into his pocket, and stepped back into the library.

Suddenly he stiffened to immobility.

His hand reached for his revolver. For, just outside the door, he heard a stealthy step.

Metz, on the other side of the door, blinked uneasily, turned as though to return to Scorpio's card table, then, instead, opened the library door and peered in. Hank flattened himself against the wall, behind a portiere.

Metz snapped on the light, and his eyes swept the room.

An open drawer caught the gangster's eye.

He snapped out the light, and, hastening to the parlor, beckoned Scorpio and Eddie.

"Metz thinks someone's in the house," Scorpio whispered. Grimly the men followed him down the hall to the library door. Hank, within the library, backed into the bedroom.

In the library, Metz pointed to the open drawer.

Scorpio scowled.

Silently they searched the room.

"Maybe the bedroom," suggested Eddie.

The listening Hank slid silently into the bathroom.

Scorpio and his men entered. Their gaze swept the room.

"Nobody here—the dummy is crazy," said Eddie.

"Yeah? Crazy like a fox," frowned Scorpio.

Meantime, from the bathroom, Hank had slipped down the hall, and was almost at the front door when a smothered cry stopped him. He turned to confront Anne.

"What are you doing here?" she whispered.

He had no time to answer. Scorpio and his men were approaching from the library door.

"The joint basketball rules committee held its annual meeting here Monday night and listened to an interpretation of various changes in the regulations by Oswald Tower, editor of the Basketball Guide.

"The most important rule revision cuts the 'time out' allowance from two minutes to one. Another prohibits high school teams from playing more than three overtime periods and still another gives the referee the right to take the ball from any player who holds it more than five seconds in the back court while closely guarded.

"At the same time Tower pointed out that under the old rules there is nothing to prevent the referee from disqualifying a player for one flagrant personal foul and that there was no need for him to wait until the player had committed four.

"L. W. St. John, of Ohio State, chairman, pleaded for 'sane, sensible officiating' and asked officials not to call 'every little rule in the book' to the discontent of player and spectator alike."

MRS. JUDD IS RESTLESS

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 29 (UP)—Winnie Ruth Judd tossed restlessly

on her cot at the county jail today while a last desperate attempt was made to prolong her stay in Los Angeles.

She does not want to return to Phoenix, where she assertedly killed Hedvig Samuelson and Mrs. Agnes Anne Lerol, her former companions, and stuffed their bodies in trunks for shipment to Los Angeles.

She pleads that she is too ill, that her wounded left hand hurts too much to permit her removal.

But Arizona authorities were confident that she would be enroute to Phoenix tonight, despite pending action on a writ of habeas corpus and plans of defense attorneys to apply for a second writ.

Hearing on the original writ was scheduled for today. It was believed the retaining motion would be dismissed. Mrs. Judd's attorneys, hoping to delay the trial as long as possible to let prospective jurors forget some of the feeling against the woman planned to ask for a second writ on technical grounds.

which were made on request. There were 379 official orders issued and 741 compliances made. Compliances made on verbal suggestions from the inspector or letters from the department numbered 888, no official orders were necessary. One hundred and fifty-one orders were modified, in contrast to 63 modifications of the year previous. These modifications were made because of economic conditions. At the close of the year 223 cases were still pending, as against 520 of the year previous.

"This department has received splendid cooperation from property owners," Mr. Hogston stated. "They are realizing that we work for the common good. During the economic depression we are making a great effort to protect the owner of the property in question and the owner of such property as may be endangered by a nearby fire hazard. At times this becomes difficult, and the cooperation of the property owner becomes very valuable. We have found that reasonable methods are the surest way of securing the best results."

Greencastle Man Praises Hoyt's Compound

Local Monon Railroad Man Says
Hoyt's Compound Acted Like
Magic In His Case

Mr. Charles Vanlandingham living at 1001 Crown street Greencastle is the latest local resident to add his name to the ever growing list of local people who are praising the Wonder medicine, Hoyt's Compound. Mr. Vanlandingham who has lived in Greencastle since 1917, is employed by the Monon Railroad and has thousands of friends and acquaintances in and around Greencastle. Makes the following statement about Hoyt's Compound.

The Hoyt Man

For the past eight years I have been in a general rundown condition and six years ago I contracted a stubborn case of kidney trouble which broke my rest several times each night and I attribute this weakening condition to the broken rest I lost my appetite and food that I had been eating in the past failed to agree with me, souring in my stomach and causing gas to form and at times would seem like a rock in my stomach, this gas pressure would press against my heart and cause striking pains, also after meals I would belch hot liquid, which would burn my throat.

I suffered untold agony with these troubles and had tried nearly every advertised medicine without result.

Just when I had given up hopes I read about Hoyt's Compound in the Panner and at once went to the National Cut Rate to see the Hoyt man, and at once he convinced me that Hoyt's was the medicine that I needed.

I have now taken two bottles of Hoyt's Compound and feel like a new man, every trace of kidney trouble is gone and I now sleep all night without a break in my rest. I can eat anything on the table without the terrible misery after meals and have not had a spell with gas since taking Hoyt's Compound. I have more strength and am feeling better than I have at anytime in the last eight years.

I want the people of Greencastle to know that I have given this statement voluntarily and that I owe my health to Hoyt's Compound. I will verify this statement at anytime.

Hoyt's Compound has a wonderful benefitting and relieving action on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. It produces a better appetite, improves digestion and cleanses away old accumulations of gas, sourness, fermentation, half-digested substance and other impure "matter" from the stomach and intestines, thus putting an end to many forms of stomach trouble. It cleanses the liver and puts it into better action; acts as a diuretic stimulant to sluggish kidneys and thus helps to finish out impurity that may have been causing pains in the back, rising at night, etc.; and it clears out quantities of old waste matter from the bowels, which often become clogged and crusted with filthy germ-laden food residue.

HUGE TASK IN DROUGHT AID MET BY RED CROSS

Relief Given to Distressed Helpless in Meeting Serious Situation, Chairman Payne Says.

"The year of the great drought," as these past twelve or more months will be known to future generations, wrought great damage to millions. Not alone did the crops, which were burned in the summer of 1929, several million persons of food, but the drought disaster continued in the summer of 1931 in the northwestern states, and also brought other minor catastrophes in its wake, such as forest fires, and the grasshopper plague. More than a year has elapsed since the American Red Cross launched, in August, 1929, its first moves for relief of the drought-stricken farmers, and in that time more than 2,500,000 persons were given food, clothing, medical aid, shelter or other type of assistance. At no period during this year were there fewer than 70,000 persons being aided and at the peak of the relief work on March 1, last, more than 2,000,000 persons were being helped.

Today, still as a result of the drought, the Red Cross is giving extended relief in parts of North Dakota, Washington and Montana, where thousands of hundreds of families were wiped out this past summer, when a second and more severe spell of dry weather was prolonged in that region. This drought relief presented the greatest task that has ever been undertaken by the Red Cross as a peacetime activity. The Mississippi Valley flood of 1927, while more spectacular, and calling for relief of a costlier type because homes and possessions were swept away, affected hardly one-fourth the number of people who suffered because of the drought.

In addition to the broad program of drought relief still being carried on, John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, has given the following suggestion to Chapter chairmen, in regard to unemployment relief: "Where there is suffering and want from any cause and the fundamental local needs are not being met, Chapters may participate in the community plans for meeting the need."

Some type of general family relief, whether for the drought victims, the unemployed or the war veteran and his family, were carried on by more than 2,000 Red Cross Chapters last year, Judge Payne said.

"The drought relief work of 1929-31," he added, "the relief now being extended following last summer's drought, principally in Montana and North Dakota; the assistance which is being given to ex-service men and their families; and the part which several hundred Chapters are taking locally in their communities' relief measures are activities of the Red Cross, national and local, which have met and are meeting some of the serious needs of the present situation."

AN ELECTION SHADOW

WASHINGTON, D. C., — "The spectre of 'foreign entanglements,' so long a factor in American politics, is once more casting a sinister shadow over the national capital. American participation in the League of Nations conference on the Sino-Japanese Manchurian dispute has created a situation that promises to rival in bitterness the late President Wilson's campaign to have the United States become a member of the League.

The irreconcilables of the Senate, led by Senators Borah and Johnson, regard the invitation of the League as a "spider and fly" proposition, and Secretary of State Stimson's acceptance has placed a powerful weapon in their hands.

Granting the worthlessness of Mr. Stimson's motives, the League's opponents point out that membership in the League has been voted down emphatically by the American electorate, and are outspoken in their condemnation of his action. They interpret the presence of an American representative at the League's deliberations as the thin end of a wedge that may culminate in full membership in the organization, which the people of this country rejected at the polls.

On the other hand, League adherents are jubilant that the United States, even in so small a measure, pays recognition to the Geneva body, expressing the opinion that American participation in the League conference, even at this late date, is a vindication of the Wilson policy of 1919, and that the present move is but a preliminary step to League membership.

Since the League's inception, it has had its champions and its opponents in the United States, but in the early years of its operation the World War was still fresh in the minds of our administrators and a strict isolation policy was followed. However, about six years ago, America started to take an interest in European affairs and since then our statesmen have taken a hand in several measures on the sister continent—notably the Dawes Plan, the Kellogg Pact and other schemes related to pacific, economic and tariff questions. This interest culminated in the United States joining the World Court in 1929.

During the time that the United States was cooperating in the humanitarian activities of the League, the opponents of that body never ceased to sound their warning, urging America to stick to its "hands off" policy and pointing out the danger of becoming involved in the nationalistic struggles of Europe, while advocates of the League lauded it as an invaluable instrument for the maintenance of world peace.

What will be the outcome of the latest move it is impossible to predict. The fact that an American representative is sitting in the inner Council of the League, even though he is instructed to take no part in the discussions other than those relating to the Kellogg Pact may have a potent effect on American politics.

Political careers were made and wrecked over the Wilsonian League debacle and history has an uncanny the sister continent—notably the knack of repeating itself.

Babe Shows How to Do It

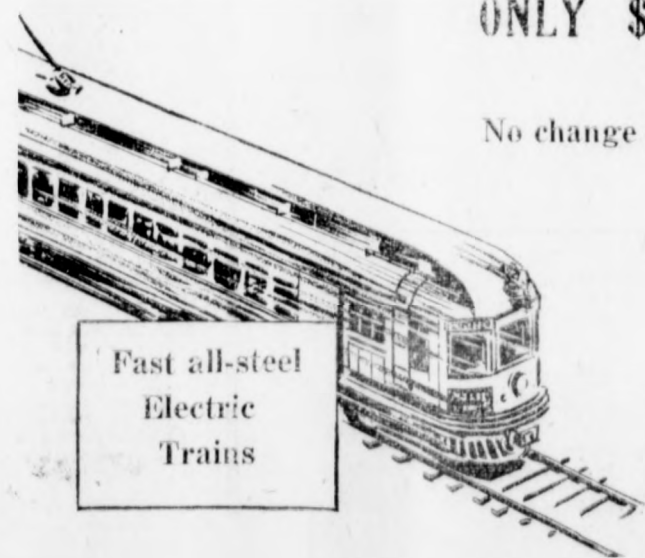

Babe Ruth, idolized by American youth as the "King of Swat," is shown playing "big brother" to a youngster at the Los Angeles children's clinic during a visit to the crippled youngsters' institution. Babe appears to be as adept at stunts on the wall-bar as he is at clouting out circuit wallers.

Chief Justice Hughes In Tribute to Red Cross

One of the finest tributes ever paid the American Red Cross and its membership was that by Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, of the United States Supreme Court, on the occasion of the fiftieth birthday anniversary of the organization on May 21 of this year. Mr. Hughes said: "The American Red Cross represents the united voluntary effort of the American people in the ministry of mercy. It is the finest and most effective expression of the American heart. It knows no partisanship. In the perfection of its cooperation, there is no blemish of distinctions by reason of race or creed or political philosophy."

"However we may differ in all things else, in the activities of the Red Cross we are a united people. None of our boasted industrial enterprises surpasses it in efficiency. It moves with the precision and discipline of an army to achieve the noblest of human aims."

"The American Red Cross is not only first in war but first in peace. The American people rely upon its ministrations in every great catastrophe. It has given its aid in over one thousand disasters. When, as we hope, war will be no more, still the Red Cross, in the countless activities of relief and rehabilitation, will continue to function as the organized compassion of our country."

Aid for War Veterans

More than 430,000 ex-service men and their families were aided through 5,008 Red Cross Chapters and the national organization during the year ending June 30, 1931. Dependent families were cared for, veterans' claims were filed, hospitalization obtained and many other services given. Part of each contribution during the American Red Cross annual roll call, Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day, goes toward supporting this vital work for veterans of the World War and other wars in which the United States has engaged.

Books for the Blind

Through American Red Cross Chapters, 3,827 volumes of novels, class books and others, transcribed into braille for blind readers, have been added to libraries, in the past year. These books are to be obtained through the Library of Congress and city libraries. This activity, carried on by a great number of devoted women volunteers in Red Cross Chapters, and its inception in preparing books for war blinded.

STATE FIRE MARSHAL'S REPORT

"The object of the state fire marshal department is to improve and to save property," states Alfred Hogston, state fire marshal, in his annual report of that department. The report covers the fiscal year ending September 30, 1931.

At the beginning of the year there were 520 official orders pending against property considered hazardous from the point of view of fire. These orders were for repairs or removal. During the year there were 1,598 inspections of property, all of

BEEHIVE EXPLODES

Jacob Goshorn is confined to his home in Mecca with a broken left leg. Thursday of last week he decided he would kill a hive of bees which were diseased. After putting chemicals in the hive he used a blow torch to set the hive on fire. The result was the hive exploded throwing pieces of boards in every direction. One struck him on the leg breaking the large bone and splintering the small bone. He was taken to the Clinton hospital where the bones were set and then brought back to his home.—Rockville Republican.

Sixteen—Poor Student; Nineteen—Operatic Diva

Voice Won Fame for Young American Girl in Three Years. To Star at Home After Brilliant Triumph Abroad.

Mrs. MARTINELLI and Mrs. SERAFINA DI LEO. — SERAFINA IN THE KITCHEN
Three years ago Serafina Di Leo was just one of many struggling young operatic students; now, while still in her teens, she has returned from several years spent in Italy with a five-year contract with the Chicago Civic Opera in her pocket and the distinction of being the youngest American girl ever to take a leading role at La Scala, Milan, Italy's opera house. All because Fate took her to the home of the famous tenor, Giovanni Martinelli, who immediately recognized her vocal gifts. Besides being a famous dramatic soprano, the star is a very unaffected and capable young person, just as apt to burst into a jazz hit as sing an aria, and well able to hold her own in the ordinary arts.
